Former Attache Tells of Life in Morocco

Earthquake-devastated Agadir, Berber tribes, Moslem customs and the not-so-ugly American make up much of the conversation of William Holley, El Camino College history instructor and former cultural attache to the United States Embassy in Morocco.

The effect and importance of American embassies, Holley said are not clearly explained to the American people. For example, he added, the work of the cultural attache in any embassy is to create an image of the United States that will stand favorably against the Russian image.

At his Casablanca station, Holley used every form of communication available—newspaper and magazine articles, radio programs, television, lectures, and American movies—to inform the Moroccan people.

Most important was the teaching of English to Moslems. The primary Moroccan languages are Arabic and French. Staff personnel used two methods to establish classes in English. Newspaper advertisements announced classes for any interested persons.

A second method was to form a special target group of interested organizations. Professional groups of teachers and lawyers, youth clubs, and student clubs were established in towns or villages visited by instructors.

Relationships of the United States with Morocco are hampered by the history of Morocco more than by any acts of the U.S., Holley said. Long a part of the French colonial empire, the Moroccans forced the French from their land in 1956.

Mohammed V, the present ruler, and his followers achieved this without an excess of national violence, Holley said, but they committed one error.

They forced out European capital and technology and are now attempting to replace these through native sources.

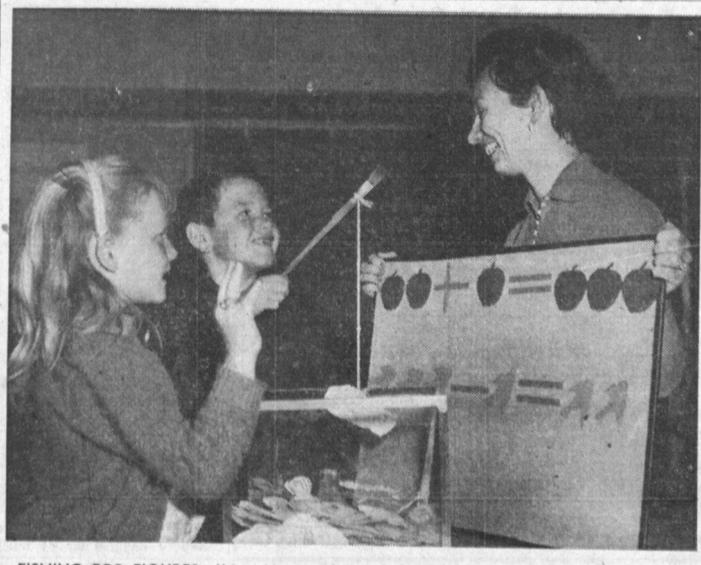

The result is a slowing down of manufacturing and a lessening of prosperity.

Beyond the serious problems of international relations, Holley, observed, an embassy post becomes a lesson in people and history.

Most of the women remain veiled in the Moslem custom; the desert tribes still make journeys on camels in caravans, and the desert forts, now deserted, still offer an atmosphere foreign to the times.

Holley disagrees completely with the popular concept of diplomatic life abroad. On the majority of posts, he said, the social life is no more than that experienced by a family living in the United States.

He describes the staff families as being dedicated people who work hard at their jobs and make a number of sacrifices in return for representing the United States.

Turabout will be fair play on Friday, April 8, as the GAA holds its annual backward dance. Theme will be "Frisco's Gay Nineties."

For this event, girls will ask the boys and have to bear the evening's cost.

Eight North High students walked off with awards at the district's Science Fair last week.

Honored were Mason Welpert and Dava Mellay, who won first prizes; Jim Brodsky, Melody Matheny, and Peggy Gutsch, who took second prizes; and Ricky Rose, and Charles Opie, who copped third places.

Sandy Rayes reigned as queen of the Cotton Ball last week. The Girls' League Cotton Day will be Wednesday.

North High will host the annual north Torrance music festival with the Saxon band and orchestra joining musicians from elementary schools in North Torrance.

Director Robert Jones will lead the group. The performance will start at 7 p.m. Friday in the North High gym.

Dr. Vern Robinson of the University of California presented an award of merit to North High at an assembly last week. The award noted the success of NHS grads who attended the university.

Saxon baseballers will have a busy week with games against Hawthorne, here, on Friday; Redondo, here, on Tuesday; and Leuninger, there, next Thursday.

Plans are underway for the annual Girls' League Variety Show April 11-15.

Seventy North High students took the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test recently, under the direction of the counseling staff, Jean Melton, Marion Smerdel, and James Blue.

It is the first step in the sixth annual competition for merit scholarship provided by corporations and professional groups.

Summer School Registrations Being Accepted

Registrations for summer school in the Torrance Unified School District are being accepted, according to Trudy Aldershot, director.

The sessions will be held from June 30 through July 29, a period of six weeks. Students will be accepted throughout April, with a May 1 deadline.

Summer school sessions are an extension of the regular school year, with work for bright, average, and slow students in elementary and high-school classes, where demand is sufficient.

High school courses to be offered for eighth-grade graduates include refresher math, reading, algebra I, practical typing, English, general science, instrumental music, vocal music, practical speech, exploratory foreign language, and art.

Courses may be taken for credit.

Speech therapy will be offered at Magruder, Calle Mayor, Flavian, and Fern-Greenwood schools.
